Handling modifications are the thing most do first for the 124 Spider. If you set the toe out to 1 to 2 degrees on the front, and add some negative camber then cornering will often improve. We would go to a maximum drop of 25mm - 39 mm on most models. You risk compromising your handling if you go lower than this. Turning our attention to the 124 Spiders engine we need to get a bit more power out of the top end.
